Caballero attorney hints at federal suit

The attorney for Dr. Emilio Caballero, West Texas State University art department chairman who contends he was coerced into resigning his office, charged late Friday that university regents, who balked Friday morning at a decision on whether to reinstate Caballero to the chairmanship, side-stepped their responsibilities and hinted at the possibility of a federal civil rights lawsuit over the case.

George Whittenburg, who in a formal presentation before regents Friday asked that they reinstate Caballero to his post because his resignation last January was forced by administrators, said late Friday he believes the resignation was coerced to remove Caballero in favor of a younger department head.

"I think Dr. Caballero was being forced out for some younger person," he charged. "I think that's age discrimination and a violation of the federal civil rights act, but I'm going to await the outcome of the attorney general's opinion."

Regents, after hearing presentations from Whittenburg and five area supporters of Caballero, voted to have a regents committee seek an opinion from the Texas attorney general on the status of Caballero, who through Whittenburg submitted a letter to regents during their meeting withdrawing his resignation and alleging administrators forced him to resign last January.

"I hope the board of regents does not find any permanent enclave in the A. G. opinion and the responsibility comes right back to them," Whittenburg later said of the regent action.

He was critical of their side-stepping of the issue.

"If we've learned anything out of the past several years, it is that underhanded conduct and attempts to cover-up have no place at public institutions in a free society," Whittenburg said. "If they should discharge Dr. Caballero on the merits (of the case) that is one thing, but to hide behind a forced resignation..."

Whittenburg said he feels the regents were "looking for a way to avoid fulfilling the very responsibility they were appointed to fulfill."

"I'd much rather they had said 'let's not beat around the bush' and determine what's best and look at it on the merits," he said. The regents committee, appointed by Box early Friday afternoon and consisting of T. L. Roach, Don Curry and Wallace Harrell, is to contact the attorney general and ask whether the fact that Caballero alleges he was coerced into resigning would nullify the letter of resignation which regents approved at their last meeting. The committee is also to recommend a way for regents to resolve the situation at the September regents meeting.

Whittenburg said late Friday he has "no doubt" that a coerced resignation is null and void.

(If regents must wait for an attorney general's opinion as long as other governmental bodies in Randall County have waited for opinions, though, the opinion may come some time in the summer of 1976. The last opinion sought by the Randall County district attorney's office was rendered nearly nine months after it had been requested.)

The regents' balk at a decision distressed Caballero, contacted following the meeting at his Amarillo home.

"Wow," he said quietly. "That's such a long time to wait."

The emotion, the turmoil, the whole thing is making a wreck of everybody."

During the regular regents meeting Friday afternoon, Whittenburg asked the board to consider whether Caballero should have been asked to resign on the merits of the case.

He presented a letter from Caballero which read in part:

"As you now know my letter of January 15 to Dr. Watkins was the result of threats and coercion... At the present time I still hold the position (as art department chairman) and I withdraw and repudiate the so-called resignation."

The letter states that Caballero felt initially it would be futile to fight the administrators who forced the resignation, but later decided to challenge the action.

"I will not resign voluntarily and I demand that any efforts to (force me to resign) be done openly and above-board with full disclosure rather than in an underhanded manner."

Caballero asked in the letter that the regents consider the matter on the merits of the case "rather than sweeping it under the rug."

Whittenburg asked that the regents recognize the original resignation was not a resignation at all.

Five area residents, including two from Pampa, presented formally petitions containing 2000 signatures, petitions asking that Caballero be reinstated as chairman of the art department, a position he has held 20 years.

Those appearing on Caballero's behalf spoke to what they termed his achievements in art and his contributions to the cultural Panhandle community.

Following the presentations, a split of the board was apparent.

Dr. Irby Carruth, T. L. Roach and Jack Shelton said they would back the decision made by the board two months ago in accepting the resignation of Caballero and indicated they felt the matter to be closed.

Board Chairman Cloyce Box and Regent Don Curry, however, spoke for deciding whether to allow Caballero to withdraw his resignation.

Curry pointed out that because the resignation was coerced, it might legally be null and void, anyway.

Box contended that the regents had not been involved in discussing the merits of Caballero's original resignation letter and had acted at that time only to accept the resignation.

He stressed the regents should not get into the merits of the decision. (See ATTORNEY, Page 4)

Temp. hits 103

The afternoon sun seared through the 100-degree mark Friday here to hit 103 — the highest temperature recorded so far by official weather observers.

Fire Department Capt. Joe Rice, who is in charge of the weather station in Canyon, said the Friday high was the hottest reported since the fire department took over weather recording for the U. S. Weather Service in August 1973.

The 103 high was the culmination of increasingly higher temperatures recorded for June. May ended with a high temperature of 78 degrees recorded on the 31st, and June began with a high of 82 recorded on the 1st.

June 2 saw a high temperature jump of five degrees to 87 and the 3rd was close to the 100 mark at 97 degrees. On the 4th, the afternoon temperature dropped two degrees for a high of 95, but on the 5th it edged to the 99-degree mark.

First wheat brought in

Randall County's first load of wheat was harvested Friday afternoon and brought to the Umbarger Co-Op Saturday morning according to Vince Rameakers, manager of the elevator.

M. W. Hicks, who farms five miles northeast of Umbarger, brought the county's first wheat into the elevator.

The wheat tested out at 59 pounds per bushel and had a moisture content of 15.5. Hicks predicts his wheat will be harvested at a rate of 20 bushels to the acre.

Regent Curry backs bid for airing of charges

WT Regents Secretary Don Curry called for a public and open airing of the reasons Dr. Emilio Caballero was asked to resign as chairman of the art department. Curry said he personally believes Caballero was coerced into resigning.

Curry, who voted against accepting Caballero's resignation at a Feb. 26 meeting of the regents, said he voted against the proposition at that time because he felt the long-time art chairman had been forced into the resignation.

"A public hearing would be healthy," Curry said Saturday in a News interview.

"This is clearly not an administrative policy matter," said the Fort Worth attorney. "It goes to questionable acts by various individuals."

A public hearing on the reasons Caballero was asked to resign would help put a stop to rumors and clear the air, Curry said.

"I regret this thing is so much out of hand," he said, "but it just really does concern me when someone of Dr. Caballero's stature — or anyone else for that matter — is forced out of the university without the body responsible to the public having the opportunity to hear it on its merits."

Curry was critical of fellow board members T. L. Roach and Jack Shelton who openly declared Friday they would back the original administrative decision.

And, he said he is "extremely concerned" that the resignation, if it was coerced or forced, might be a violation of Texas criminal statutes.

"It seems to me in view of what was brought out, it raises another aspect that is even more frightening," he said. "It's verging on criminal conduct when you coerce an official and force him to take action against his will."

Citing a portion of the state law passed in 1973 governing the actions of public officials, Curry said it is against the law to coerce a public official into doing something in his official capacity.

He said he personally will ask the university legal counsel for a legal opinion of the law in that light.

New arts building okayed for campus construction

West Texas State University regents Friday approved final plans for a new $4.2 million campus fine arts building, authorized advertising for bids for construction of the structure and are expected to let a contract at their September meeting.

Following a presentation of the final plans by Wood & Associates of Dallas, the regents took the final step in what has been a two-year planning process for the new building.

The action was taken after an admonition from Board Chairman Cloyce K. Box that the university could not afford "frills" in the new building, and after Financial Vice President Hermas Miller confirmed that the university has more than enough money available to finance the project if costs are as anticipated.

The architectural firm presented a projected budget, which they said should be viewed with a 10 per cent margin of error, totalling $4 million as a minimum project cost. With several alternates, the building could cost about $4.2 million, they said.

Cost for the basic building, which is an off-center pentagon arrangement, is projected to be about $3 million with furnishings and equipment adding $440,000, fees, testing and surveys to cost about $260,000 and with a $150,000 contingency fund.

Miller told regents the university has $5.2 million available for the construction project currently.

The new building, which is to sit just north of the University Complex South on campus, will house a large recital hall, music classrooms and practice rooms, art studios and classrooms, and other fine arts facilities.

Included as an alternate for bidding contractors will be a proposed out-door theater, which would back up to the outside wall of the building. Anticipated cost of the theater, which would contain stage area and then a semi-bowl shaped grassed area for seating, is about $20,000.

Regents are expected to approve a contract for the construction at their regular September meeting, tentatively set for Sept. 20.

In other business, regents took several affirmative actions which will directly affect students next fall.

Upon the recommendation of Dr. T. Paige Carruth, student life vice president, the regents okayed a 20 per cent increase in room charges to be made next fall for dormitories.

Room rates will vary for the fall according to dormitory, but Carruth said the rates will be 20 per cent higher.

Carruth told the regents that (See ARTS, Page 4)

Costs have tripled in three years

Umbarger asks again for funds

In the three years since Umbarger citizens first initiated a request for funding of an underground sanitary water system, the price for the installation has tripled.

Umbarger has resubmitted its request for federal aid for the system and the tab to Uncle Sam and the residents will be $153,000, according to the figures submitted with the request last week.

"That's three times as much as it would have cost if we could have got it three years ago when we made the request," Louis Raef, spearhead of the community drive for the system, said.

Raef worked with employees of McMorries & Associates, an Amarillo engineering firm, last week to compile a new request to be submitted to the federal FHA, which had apparently shelved the original request made in 1972.

Panhandle Regional Planning Commission employees prodded the FHA to seek another request from the Umbarger residents so an updated money amount would be on file.

Bill McMorries of the engineering firm said FHA officials requested the Umbarger request be resubmitted.

He quoted an FHA official as saying the federal agency expected to receive more funding for such projects.

Hunsley Road plans okayed

Underpass project nears end

Texas Highway Department officials hope construction of the 15th Street U. S. 60 underpass will be completed and open for use within the next two weeks, and construction plans continue on another similar structure for U. S. 87 just north of Canyon.

Donald Day, local engineer, said workmen are awaiting the arrival of parts before the project, which began last June, can be completed.

"We're nearly through," Day said. "We're waiting on the guard rail and then we'll just have the hot mix left."

He said once the guard rails are in, it will not take long to finish the hot mix pouring on both the 15th Street overpass and the roadbed of U. S. 60, which was reconstructed under the existing grade of the city street.

For nearly a year, Hunsley Hills residents — or motorists trying to get into Hunsley Hills — have been detoured around what had become a main traffic artery.

Highway Department officials at the Amarillo regional office said this week $435,000 has been set aside for construction of a similar interchange at the U. S. 87 intersection with Hunsley Road about a mile north of the city.

Raef said he was told the proposal would be "put in the mill and if any money is available we'd be in the running."

He said he expects some word on the proposal after July, the opening of the federal fiscal year.

McMorries figures indicate total cost of the project — which would provide a central well and underground lines for the Umbarger community — is estimated at $153,600.

With 46 potential customers for the system putting up $100 each, the total grant and loan request would amount to about $149,000.

Of that, McMorries said, the government would grant one-half the funding and the other half would be paid off through monthly fees by the system customers. That would amount to a monthly bill of about $12.75 per customer.

For more than three years, Umbarger residents have realized their current individual water systems are inadequate for their current needs.

Raef has pointed out that many individual wells are being polluted by bore holes and septic tanks, and a PRPC study undertaken several years ago termed the water need situation in Umbarger as critical.

The project has been included in the 1975-76 Urban system Program approved recently the Texas Highway Commission.

Also included in the program for the coming year is funding for extension of Hunsley Road from its intersection with U. S. 87 east to tie into Washington Street.

Day said a portion of the engineering studies have been completed on the overpass at U. S. 87 and Hunsley Road and environmental statements and schematics have been completed.

Preparation of plans is also almost completed on the Hunsley Road extension, which upon completion will provide a north access to the West Texas State University campus.

Day said about 70 per cent of the funding needed for that project has already been allocated for the program, but the department is about $300,000 shy of the full amount needed.

He said he is optimistic the project will be fully funded and the project can be begun this year.

Plans call for the farm-to-market road to go under the existing Santa Fe Railway tracks which run parallel to the highway right-of-way.

Workers begin moving historic ranch house

The T-Anchor Ranch Headquarters will soon be moving to its new home north of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum annex.

Museum workers, headed by Assistant Director Jack Downing, are currently carefully marking and dismantling the almost 100-year old structure at its original location at the West Texas State University farm next to Kimbrough Stadium.

According to Museum Director James Hanson, the ranch headquarters and its nearby shed will be taken to the museum next week, and hopefully will be ready for its dedication and public display by October.

They plan to restore the structure, with the help of pictures and information on file in the museum's archives, as it was in the 1890s. An Eclipse windmill will be on display next to the headquarters, which will be open to the public during regular museum hours.

"It's the oldest building I know of in the Panhandle of Texas," Hanson said.

The three-room headquarters, built by Charles Goodnight's brother-in-law Leigh Dyer in 1877, was the first such house in the northern 36 Texas counties. Its history has been long and varied, as its ownership progressed from early ranchers and English syndicates to WTSU, serving them at times as a pay office, post office, chow hall and bunkhouse for ranch hands.

The T-Anchor Ranch ended its short but colorful career in 1902, with its 225 sections of land being broken up and sold. The 80 acres on which the house now stands was purchased by the state in 1927, and given to WTSU. When the college acquired the house, officials removed the kitchen, bedroom and porch which had been added in 1906 by the J. L. Prichard family to expand their newly-

Workmen dismantle the kitchen area of the old T-Anchor Ranchhouse in preparation for moving the old cabin, the first in Randall County, to a site near the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum on the West Texas State University campus. The workmen must number each piece of material removed for future identification. Roofing of the structure will not be saved in the move, which has begun at the cabin site just east of U. S. 87.

Randall County officials will only speculate on what financial impact the creation of a state commission on jail standards will have on their operations, but they said last week that if standards now on the law books are rigidly enforced the financial outlay could be enormous.

Legislators during their session which ended last Monday passed a bill creating a state commission on jail standards with far-reaching powers of enforcement and the legislation is now pending gubernatorial signature before becoming law.

Even if the commission only enforces laws on jail standards now in the statute books, says Sheriff Cliff Longest, "everybody (in the state) would have to start rebuilding their jails."

Longest said the current standards, if enforced, could cost Randall County taxpayers a good deal of money.

Under current law, the Texas Department of Health is charged with making annual jail inspections in Texas counties. But, the department is given no power to enforce the standards established in the law.

Each year the inspections have been made in Randall County, the inspector has commented on the sanitary and healthful conditions of the local jail, but has noted the jail does not meet several other standards set out in the law.

In a letter to commissioners court last year, the inspector noted, for example, that prisoners in the jail do not have access to a day room facility.

Minimum standards proposed by a Dallas federal judge and enforced by the judge for Dallas' county jail forced that county to construct a new facility. Those standards require library and recreational facilities in jails.

Neither Longest nor County Judge Woody Pond have seen a copy of the legislation approved creating a jail standards commission for the state.

"If jail standards are enforced we're going to have to make some changes and probably it will cost the taxpayers of the county more (See BILL, Page 4)

Science Fiction Has Impact On Future

Dr. Jack Williamson knew that he had published his first science fiction story when he saw it in "Amazing Stories" magazine on a newsstand in Canyon, Texas. He was just 20 at the time and had mailed the story some time before but had not yet received the ominous "rejection" slip. So, Canyon holds fond memories for him.

Williamson has been writing science fiction since he was 17. He grew up in Eastern New Mexico and wrote in his spare time on the farm.

The author of 30 science fiction books, Williamson attended his first two years of college at West Texas State University. Having always been interested in science fiction he grew discouraged that he was not learning anything in college that would help him so he dropped out and spent the next 25 years as a freelance science fiction writer. Twenty-five years after he started college he received his bachelor's and master's degrees. He later received his Ph. D. from the University of Colorado in 1964.

Story ideas for science fiction are actually "extrapolations and possibilities of projected trends," Williamson said. For example, Williamson cited a new book he is working on now dealing with genetic engineering. Experimentation with genetics in its initial stages now but Williamson's books projects the idea that we will be able to recreate ourselves within 50 years.

Broad reading is essential to science fiction writing, Williamson believes. He reads many scientific journals and especially "Scientific American," to keep up with new directions in science and technology.

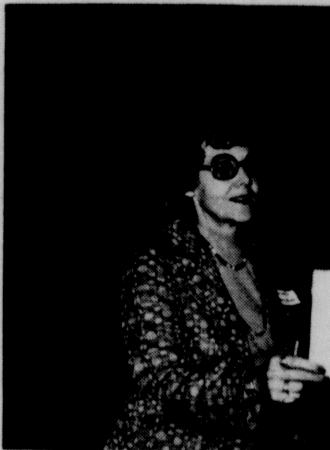

Williamson, who teaches at Eastern New Mexico University, considers H.G. Wells, "the father of modern science fiction," and wrote his Ph. D. dissertation on Wells' entitled "Critic of Progress." It was later published as a book. He notes that Jonathan Swift, with his "Gulliver's Travels," was probably a precursor of science fiction.

Science fiction is an American thing," says Williamson. Many Britishers were writing at the turn of the century, but America is where all the science fiction was published. Even today America publishes more science fiction than any other country, with over 700 science fiction titles published last year. American science fiction is widely translated in other countries and markets for paper back novels is growing, according to Williamson. "The emphasis on science fiction in the United States is an indication that America has been the leader in the technological age," Williamson said.

Science fiction "contains a good deal of social comment, especially current science fiction," Williamson said. "Many of today's writers tend to be pessimistic about the future. There seems to be an underlying assumption in their writing that there are things we cannot possibly know or understand." "I do not share this approach," Williamson said. Williamson terms himself "reasonably optimistic," about the future. However, in what he terms his best novel, "The Humanoids," Williamson set out to write an optimistic novel about perfect machines in a perfect society. But, when he finished the novel, "the perfect machines turned out to be perfectly evil."

Williamson states emphatically that science fiction does have an impact on sociopolitical structures and thinking. He states that the world is now "in a crisis of faith about technology and science." We have been overcome by fears of nuclear war and diminishing resources, and we are living in a panic which has gone too far,

Dr. Jack Williamson, professor of English at Eastern New Mexico State University discusses a manuscript with local authoress Pauline Robertson at the "Writer's Roundup" at W.T.

Tom Mix Rides Again

White-hatted Tom Mix on his long-tailed stallion will thrill audiences again at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum's summer Sunday fare June 15.

"The Heart of Texas Ryan" will be shown at 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. June 15 in the museum's new lecture room on the second floor of the main building. The admission is free.

Museum Educational Director Patti Kilpatrick said that the 45-minute silent western romance will hopefully be accompanied by live music.

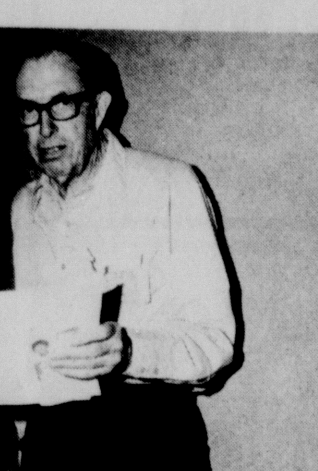

"Way Out West" will follow Hart's adventures on June 20, and stars the antics of Laurel and Hardy as they try to rescue a little girl with a gold mine. The W. C. Fields classic, "My Little Chickadee," will be shown June 29.

July will be Bicentennial month in the Sunday series, opening with "1776," a joyous historical musical on the making Williamson says.

Williamson readily admits that he too is a little afraid of change, but he also quickly acknowledges that the world is changing and he firmly believes we can solve our problems through the wise use of science and technology.

Williamson defines science fiction as "futuresology" and says that it will have an impact on the scientific revolution, on culture and mores, and that our future will be different from our past.

The group is to meet once a month and discuss agriculture. It is sponsored by CHS and the Texas Education Agency.

dormitory rates have been low for years as the university strived to keep costs down for students.
"But inflation has caught up with us," he said.
He said dormitory expenditures total about $800,000 per year, that utility rates have almost doubled and that other operating costs have also risen.
"We've got to set them up where they're paying their own way," he said. "And, we'll try to keep current with increases."
Under the new room rate schedule, Carruth told regents, the university will have a surplus of about $35,000 next fall after the fees are paid.
Regents approved a tuition and fee schedule for the fall which will not change from the previous year.
Basic tuition charge remains at $50 per semester for those taking 12 hours or less.
The building use fee will cost students taking 12 hours or more $51 per semester.
In connection with the fee schedule, regents approved a new appropriation break-down for the student service fees. The new breakdown excludes student funding of Le Mirage, the university yearbook.
It also excludes the student health service fee, an $8.50 fee, which after regent approval Friday will be charged directly to students with $7.50 of the fee going to Nebett Clinic here to provide student health care and $1 going to the university to contract with a consulting psychiatrist.
Students will find their costs for eating in the university dormitory cafeteria will not increase for the fall.
Saga Food Service was low bidder for providing the service next year and will retain charges from the past year, Carruth said.
Regents also heard a report from Miller concerning the appropriation the university received for the next biennium from the state legislature.
The university received an $11.2 million appropriation for 1975-76, an amount which is well above the current year appropriation of $7.8 million.
The formal budget for next year's operation of the university will be reviewed and approved by the regents at their September meeting.
Regents did not elect new officers as scheduled on their agenda, but postponed the action until the September meeting.
They also postponed action on three proposed changes to the board's by-laws, apparently supported by Regent T. L. Roach of Amarillo.
In a communication to Box prior to the Friday session, Roach had apparently recommended the by-laws be purchased home.

The upstairs was partitioned into sleeping quarters for the cowboys. As the museum workers pulled down the partition, they discovered packing crate boards lettered with "Our Prime Boots," "Horse shoes" and "Dodge City, Ka."
The last people to live in the ranch house were West Texas State University agriculture students, who stayed there until the early 1960s. The modern conveniences of wall paper, sanitation facilities and cement and plaster had to be removed before the workers uncovered the head-quarters's slowly decaying cedar logs, which were cut east of Happy in Palo Duro Canyon, and their mud chinking.

The workers discovered that the headquarters was not completely uninhabited, however, when they disturbed the nest of two racoon cubs in the roof.
Not many artifacts, except for the broken leg of a china doll, have been found mingled in the dirt of the floors, but Museum Curator of Anthropology Bill Harrison will sift through at least the top foot of it to check.
"We'll be able to take care of it now," Hanson concluded.

son.
"The only issue to consider is whether the regents had a responsibility to back the WTSU administration in its decision."
Shelton also took the stand that while the regents were responsible to the people of the state, they are also responsible to back the administration.
Curry said the evidence that possibly the resignation was originally coerced by the administration demanded action by the regents on whether to allow Carruth to withdraw his resignation.
After about 30 minutes of discussion, Wallace Harrell suggested the attorney general be queried for an opinion on whether the fact the resignation was coerced would negate the resignation.
The motion carried unanimously.

moneys for improvements to meet the standards," Pond said.
The legislation, if signed by the governor, would create a commission composed of two sheriffs, a county judge, a medical doctor and five laymen.
The commission would be charged with the responsibility for promulgating regulations for jail standards and would have the capability of enforcing the standards.
The commission could, if it desired, close a jail for not meeting the standards and order the transfer of prisoners to another jail in the area.

Rice said the previous high temperature recorded by his station was 102, recorded on July 24, 1974. During 1974, the 100-degree temperature mark was broken on May 28 when the high was recorded at 100.

Rape Crisis Service For Potter And Randall

The initiation of a Rape Crisis Service for Potter and Randall counties was announced Friday by the High Plains Women's Political Caucus.

Similar services and centers are located in cities throughout Texas, said Mrs. Claudia Stravato, coordinator of the project. Cities which now have similar services are Lubbock, Abilene, Dallas, Ft. Worth, Galveston, Houston, San Antonio, Austin, and El Paso.

Those coordinating efforts in Canyon are Ms. Charlotte McClure and Ms. Lisa Kuhlman.

The Rape Crisis Service goals for this area are four-fold, Mrs. McClure explained. "We want to first give the rape victim emotional support; we want to assure that the victim receives optimum treatment from the police, medical and legal authorities; we want to assist the authorities in obtaining and preserving evidence in order to obtain more convictions and to provide materials and speakers to the communities to help citizens understand the legal and social problems of rape."

The Rape Crisis Service will operate with trained volunteers from the community. Training sessions have been set for Saturday, June 14 and 21, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at the Amarillo YWCA. Volunteers will be trained in peer counseling, empathy training, crisis training, and police, medical and legal procedures.

"We hope to have the Service operational by July 1," Mrs. McClure said. "Our plans at this time are to be available through the existing drug alert/suicide prevention system operated through the Mental Health Mental Retardation facilities."

Plans for the Potter/Randall Service have been drawn up with the assistance of the Amarillo Police Department, the Potter County District Attorney, the Northwest Texas Hospital District and the Texas Rape Prevention and Control Project in Austin.

"We have also been in contact with other centers around the state to learn of their problems and procedures," Mrs. McClure said.

The services of the Rape Crisis Service will be arranged and authorized in cooperation with the police, district attorneys, sheriffs departments, and medical authorities of both counties. A rape victim would be informed of the availability of the Service by the authorities whom she first contacts. If the victim desires the Service, the Rape Crisis Service Volunteer would then accompany the victim through the medical exam at the hospital, through her statements to the authorities, and through the court hearing and trial. "The Service will be available only to those victims requesting it," Mrs. McClure said.

To The Area Farmer, Rancher, and Cattle Feeder:

Lone Star Feedyard is open for business and now receiving cattle.

We invite you to come by and visit the feedyard at any time. There will be a LFM News Service installed at the feedyard for your convenience in the near future. If you have feeder cattle you would like to feed or sell, please contact Lone Star Feedyard.

Mr. Johnny Parker, manager of the Lone Star Elevator, would like to welcome you to come by and visit. We would appreciate the opportunity to store and merchandise your grain so that you may achieve maximum profit. Lone Star Elevator is now open at Wayside, Arney, and Happy to service your grain harvesting needs.

Both the Feedyard and Grain Elevator are bonded by Lawrence Systems, Inc., thereby providing you and your banker with maximum security on grain and/or cattle.
